Turkey Said to be Tired of War.

LONDON, July 14.—For more than a week now the Austro-German offensive in Galicia and Poland has been hanging fire while the Russians, their center having fallen back on a more advantageous line in the holzer's north of Krasnik, apparently are awaiting the next move of the German forces.

Fresh ammunition and reinforcements may bring a sudden revival of activity in the theatre, but meantime the western front, by reason of the uncertainty as to which side plans a general offensive, will offer the greatest possibilities of interesting developments.

The French claim their front in the Alsace forest after being denied a violent attack made by the army of Crown Prince Frederick Wilhelm has been restored, the net result being a costly adventure for the Germans, but the strength of the offensive at this point leads the British press to speculate whether the German offensive in the Western front will not be selected for a general German offensive rather than the battle grounds in Flanders.

Many reports from Balkan sources give the rumors that Turkey is weary of war and anxious for a separate peace. Though none of the reports finds confirmation, some sections of the British press are inclined to believe that they are not impossible in that Turkey is beginning to feel the pinch of ammunition shortage in the frontiers by virtue of her refusal to allow munitions to cross her borders. The attacks made on Roumania by Berlin newspapers coincide in this theory at least to the extent that the German government in the matter of arms and munitions is being felt.

The South Wales miners' executive committee today voted to consider the situation created by the government's proclamation forbidding a strike pending negotiations regarding a new wage demands under the new law. The committee is now in conference with the government in the hope of a settlement and it is probable that the miners will continue to work on day-to-day contracts until a final agreement is reached.

BRITISH WAR REPORTS
DOCTRINE IN CHARGE
LONDON, July 14.—"One of our principal assets in the war was the power to tell the exact truth from day to day about the military operations. This need has been lost," so says the Manchester Guardian today under the head, "The Campaign in Flanders by a Student in the War." The writer adds:

"The German reports, with allowances made for occasional exaggerations of victories, and for an intelligent anticipation of events, are quite as reliable as our own. It is the more necessary to make this clear as we have several times made much of inaccuracies in the German reports of military operations."

"Impartial American opinion ranks the creditability of German reports as being superior above our own. To many Englishmen the lack of frankness in the official report is the most disconcerting thing in the war."

SWEDEN OBJECTS TO COMMERCIAL HINDRANCE
HELVING, July 14.—A dispatch from Stockholm to the Overseas News Agency says that the Swedish minister in London has delivered to the British government a protest against the "perpetual molestation of Swedish commerce."

Norway and Denmark, the message says, are supporting the protest.

ONE DOLLAR A TON IN COAL BOOSY LAMP
LONDON, July 14.—The text of the price of coal limitations bill which was issued today specifies that coal may not be sold at the full month at a price exceeding 10 shillings and 6 pence at which the same kind of coal was sold during the 12 months ending June 30, 1914.

The measure was introduced in the House of Commons yesterday by Walter Runciman, president of the Board of Trade. Violators of the act are liable to a fine not exceeding $500.

WHEELING, W. Va., July 14.—Dr. A. L. Coville, a leading physician here, is being held in Toronto, Canada, as a German spy, according to a hastily scribbled post card received today by Dr. J. M. S. Heath, a personal friend of Dr. Coville at Baltimore, Md. The message on the card, which bore the Toronto postmark read: "I am in jail in German spy. Please send credentials from Wheeling. Efforts were at once made to get into communication with Dr. Coville at Toronto."

The Redpath-Brockway Chautauqua will open its week's program in Connelville next Wednesday and already the advance guard of workers is in town. Miss Lena Pritchard and Miss Lavina Long opened headquarters at the Colonial Inn yesterday and at once put a staff of canvassers to work. Fifteen young women of town have been engaged to make collections on the subscription cards which were pledged last year to secure the Chautauqua's return. The reports that night were decidedly encouraging.

According to Miss Pritchard, the Chautauqua is making a big hit everywhere it has shown this season. The consensus of opinion is that the program is better than that last year. This will be the third Chautauqua for Connelville. Both the first and second programs were splendidly received.

Of particular interest to Connelville will be the morning children's hour this year. Special attention is given to playground work. In view of the fact that the city hopes to have a playground, the Chautauqua will be watched closely. In other towns the playground work has been taken with the year elsewhere, and Connelville will probably not be an exception.

The Chautauqua tent will be erected near the corner of the vacant lot at the corner of Pittsburg street and Cedar avenue, on the South Side. This location was generally satisfactory to the city. Strollers advertising the Chautauqua are being hung from telephone poles today. A novel scheme of advertising the Chautauqua is the placing of red ribbons among the leaves with the name "Redpath-Brockway Chautauqua" inscribed on them.

WRIGHT WILL ACCEPT

Alumnus Willing to Serve as Advisor to Navy Department.

NEW YORK, July 14.—Orrin Wright, who was among those suggested to Secretary Daniels as possible members of the proposed civilian advisory board of inventors and technical experts was today here today as saying that he would accept membership in the board if invited. He said he had not yet received such an invitation.

The board undoubtedly will be a good thing if the members will devote to their advisory function and not try to overstep it," said Mr. Wright. "The officers of the army and navy are very confident and some of them are wonderful engineers. There is no doubt that they know what they are doing. I do not think an outsider should tell them what to do and how to do it. The work of the board should be confined to suggestions."

CATTLE DISEASE EXPENSIVE

Foot and Mouth Epidemic Cost Pennsylvanians $2,000,000.

HARRISBURG, July 14.—More than 15,000 cattle and 13,000 swine had to be destroyed in Pennsylvania in the outbreak of the foot and mouth disease, which is about over, according to a report issued today by the State Livestock Sanitary Board. The cost thus far of eradicating the disease in Pennsylvania is $1,500,000, of which the federal government pays half.

The epidemic, which began in 1914, affected 783 farms in 21 of the 67 counties in the state. The previous outbreak in 1908 affected 100 farms in 13 counties.

ALASKA SIZZLES
By Associated Press.
JUNEAU, Alaska, July 14.—Extreme heat during the last 14 days has caused volcanic conditions hitherto unknown in the state. The weather bureau thermometer has registered as high as 90 degrees in the shade and the 100 degree mark has been reached by direct thermometers.

Forest fires are raging along Lynn canal and the grangers have been discharging ice at an extraordinary rate. At this time of the year the sun shines 20 of the 24 hours each day and the absence of the usual southwest wind has attributed the excessive heat. Fruit and vegetables give indications of bumper crops.

BIG GAS STRIKE RECALLS DAYS OF
FAYETTE DRILLING*Excitement Followed Opening of the Ruler Well in German Township.*IT IS STILL A GOOD PRODUCER

Prospectors Flocked to German and Surrounding Townships, But None Brought in Was as Good as That Owned by Fayette Company.

The excitement caused by the big gas well struck near McKeesport has recalled the rush of gas prospectors to this county when the old Ruler well in German township, now owned by the Fayette Gas Fuel Company, was struck in 1896. Some of the history of this well and a few facts about it at present were told by Superintendent J. E. Angle this morning.

He said the discovery of this well came about in a peculiar way. The well was first owned by Attorney Alfred Miner and several other young men who were prospecting for gas around that part of the county. There was an old driller and contractor that claimed that he could tell whether there was gas by looking at the surrounding territory. Some drilling was done and water was struck. The contractor asked for a bottle of water and after looking at it said that the section was rich with gas.

A well known as the Ruler well was drilled and the best spot in the whole county was struck. The gas, when tapped, had a rock pressure of 500 pounds. The well was first drilled in 1886 and has been active ever since. It now has a rock pressure of 150 pounds.

It took the Ruler well but one minute to get the necessary pressure after the gates were shut. In most wells it takes a few hours. The Ruler well was struck in 1886 and has been active ever since. It now has a rock pressure of 150 pounds.

The Fayette Gas Fuel Company is now drilling wells near Grapeville, not far from Greensburg, that promise to become good producers.

PARTY BALLOTS
LEGALITY AGAIN
BEFORE COURTS*Attorney Dumbauld Wants
Mandamus Issued on the Commissioners.*SOCIALIST IS THE PLAINTIFF*James E. Hanley, Candidate for Mayor of Uniontown, Demands Non-Partisan Petition and is Refused; Court
Will be Carried to Highest Court.

The legal battle to determine the constitutionality of the non-partisan ballot law as applied to cities of the third class was opened in Uniontown this afternoon by Attorney H. S. Dumbauld, who filed with the court a petition for a writ of alternative mandamus upon the county commissioners requiring them to furnish a non-partisan ballot petition to James E. Hanley, who seeks to run for the office of mayor of Uniontown. Hanley is a Socialist.

Dumbauld appeared before the commissioners this morning and demanded a non-partisan petition. In accordance with the decision reached by the commissioners to accept only party petitions, Hanley's demand was refused. Steps were immediately taken for filing the appeal.

The same procedure was followed two years ago and resulted in an opinion by Judge Van Swearingen declaring the non-partisan ballot law as applied to third class cities to be unconstitutional. No appeal was taken from that decision.

This year an appeal will be made by Judge Van Swearingen again the law unconstitutional. It is hoped that the case can be hurried through the county court in order to obtain an early ruling by the supreme court.

The supreme court has never passed on the question, although it upheld the constitutionality of the non-partisan ballot law as applied to the election of judges.

So far no petitions for city offices have been filed by any Connelville candidates. It is believed that those who may be cherishing political honors are holding off in the hope that the ballot mandate may be stricken out before the last day for filing petitions.

The horses for sale by Uniontown are already trained and are claimed to be but seven years old. They have been in service in that town and the reason for selling is that they were recently supplanted by two fire trucks.

WEDNESDAY EVENING, JULY 14, 1915

THOMAS EDISON, VOLUNTEER.

Thomas A. Edison has taken a position in the United States Government service and will devote his remarkable talents to the improvement of our military and naval services. Americans interested in the submarine and the airplane, and Europeans have elaborated them. Perhaps the American wizard will be able to add some improvements to one or both of them that will be a real worth knowing when we are ready to build our aerial and submarine fleets, and it looks as if we ought to begin to build right soon and right vigorously.

It is announced that the English intend to use 10,000 aeroplanes to drop bombs and incendiary materials on German territory, and particularly upon food and supply depots. Incidentally it may be observed that this is in line with the English plan to starve the German nation into submission, and explains why the Germans have found it necessary to mine some new rules of international law to meet the conditions involving the use of submarines and all other agencies possible in offensive and defensive warfare. The aeroplane kills the non-combatants and neutralists with as little compunction as the submarine. After all there is little or no difference between the new methods of fighting employed by the European belligerents. A clearer realization of this fact will perhaps help President Wilson and some of the June Journalists to a better understanding with Germany.

In the meantime, however, it is time this nation woke up to the fact that her naval and military strength is her greatest weakness, and that the necessity of the hour is the building up of both. In this great work we need the best talent the country affords. We need men of the highest intelligence and loyalty of that talent when it volunteers for the service as did Edison. There are others. Let them speak.

We not only need a bigger navy and a bigger army, but more important perhaps that the regular standing army in the organization and training of the militia of the various states. The time has come when they answer the call to the colors it will be to spring full-armed for the strife.

THE COAL TRADE.

The coal operators of the United States have awakened none too soon to the importance of cultivating the South American market. The business has not shared in the general industrial recovery of 1915. The business for the first half of this year is reported to be only 35 to 50% of the business of 1914.

The Connelville coke business was less than 50% capacity in 1914, but the coal business fared better. People have to burn coal for domestic purposes, if the furnace of industry is cold. There is a certain demand for coal which is not affected by the industrial situation, though the latter has a serious effect upon prices.

Strangely enough, the European war, which has contributed so materially to the restoration of the steel business of this country, and collaterally to the iron and coke, is responsible in part for the diminished coal trade. It is stated that the falling off in bunker business has been serious owing to diminished sailings, particularly of large vessels. It will be remembered that a great fleet of big German vessels has been interned on American shores since last August.

This business will come back after the war, but in the meantime we ought to cultivate that South American coal business.

JOHNSTOWN HAS BEEN NOTIFIED BY THE STATE DEPARTMENT OF HEALTH TO build a sewage disposal plant and cease turning its sewage into the streams flowing by and through the city. The Council in compliance with this order, passed an ordinance providing for the building of a sewage disposal plant, the cost of $150,000 of bonds. This ordinance has been taken back to the people on a referendum. If the people refuse to favor the bonds, the Council will at least be relieved of any personal responsibility in the matter. But what will the state do?

WIVES WHO PUT THEIR HUSBANDS IN THE WORLD HOME IN ORDER TO PLAY WITH OTHER MEN SHOULD BE DIVORCED AND MADE TO WORK FOR THEMSELVES.

SOME OF CONNELLSVILLE'S STREET PAYING MEN TO circumvent obstacles never dreamed of when it was proposed. There is a disposition to think that these matters ought to have been settled before the contracts were let and the work begun.

In the death of Dr. Joseph A. Holmes, the Federal Bureau of Mines has lost an able and beloved chief. Under his efficient administration the bureau has been built up to an important organization in the mining field, realizing the dream of the late Colonel George F. Huff, the father of the legislation founding the bureau.

The Grim Reaper has been busy among the ripened grain.

The barefoot organs of Fayette county surrendered to the Liberty Bell at the first wangle of the clapper. The eagerness of this capitulation smokes of stage effect. Looks as if the barefoot organs were part of the show coming on the stage as per program. As a matter of fact they have been for Woman Suffrage ever since the campaign was planned. Perhaps they had to be.

There's a difference between a lumber boom and a boom in lumber, but when the effect is a combination it spells prosperity.

Everybody is getting ready to picnic next month.

The News is earnestly invited to steer the newspapers of Fayette county up against that Wall of Prosperity.

The Italian Fourth falls this week. It always puts us to shame with the brilliancy of its fireworks.

It seems four a German coup is the news from Europe, but the news from Uniontown is that the Irish always fear Coup.

It looks as if the submarine and airship factories of Europe were as busy as the munition plants.

For a presumably frivolous organization the Elks are wonderfully prosperous, all of which shows that assurances are sometimes deceitful.

The town pump on the West Side has been repaired, but the East Side is still dry.

Don't tick the boat.

W. J. Lampton.

We are now on a storm-tossed, ugly sea. With the war waves all around us. With some who would like to blow us up and some who would like to ground us.

But the flag is there and the nation's all right.

There's a splashing spray from the waves, but say:

Sit still in the boat! Don't rock it!

The Lord only knows where we're going to land.

And thus far He hasn't told us.

Just we are not sailing the seas for rough.

And the strength of our right will hold us.

Still, none can deny that the water is rough.

And nothing that's offered can block it.

The main waves surround us, but say:

Sit still in the boat! Don't rock it!

The Circus

By GEORGE FITCH,

Author of "At Good Old Swast."

A Circus consists of two weeks of excitement on the billboards and two hours of thrill on a hard pine seat. Circuses are common in the East, covering many acres of canvas and making one night stands with their two thousand employees a daily sight in a European army of a million men, and across the country. Magazine writers need to spend a good deal of time describing the marvels of organization which enabled a circus company to eat its meals regularly in a tent, but since last August this hasn't been the world as much as it did formerly.

The circus consists of a "main top," a menagerie and a side show. The "main top" contains three rings in which athletes display new and startling feats and stunts. This tent, which is as large as a Indian farm, also contains two platforms and a hippodrome track, to say nothing of a band, a clown and a few human sellers.

The menagerie is a large collection of innumerable animals, most of them imported from foreign lands. It is a place of interest and awe to become intimately acquainted with the lion and the tiger without getting mixed up with them gastronomically.

The menagerie is a large collection of innumerable animals, most of them imported from foreign lands.

The side show is a sort of vacuum cleaner which relieves the guest of any change which he may have overlooked.

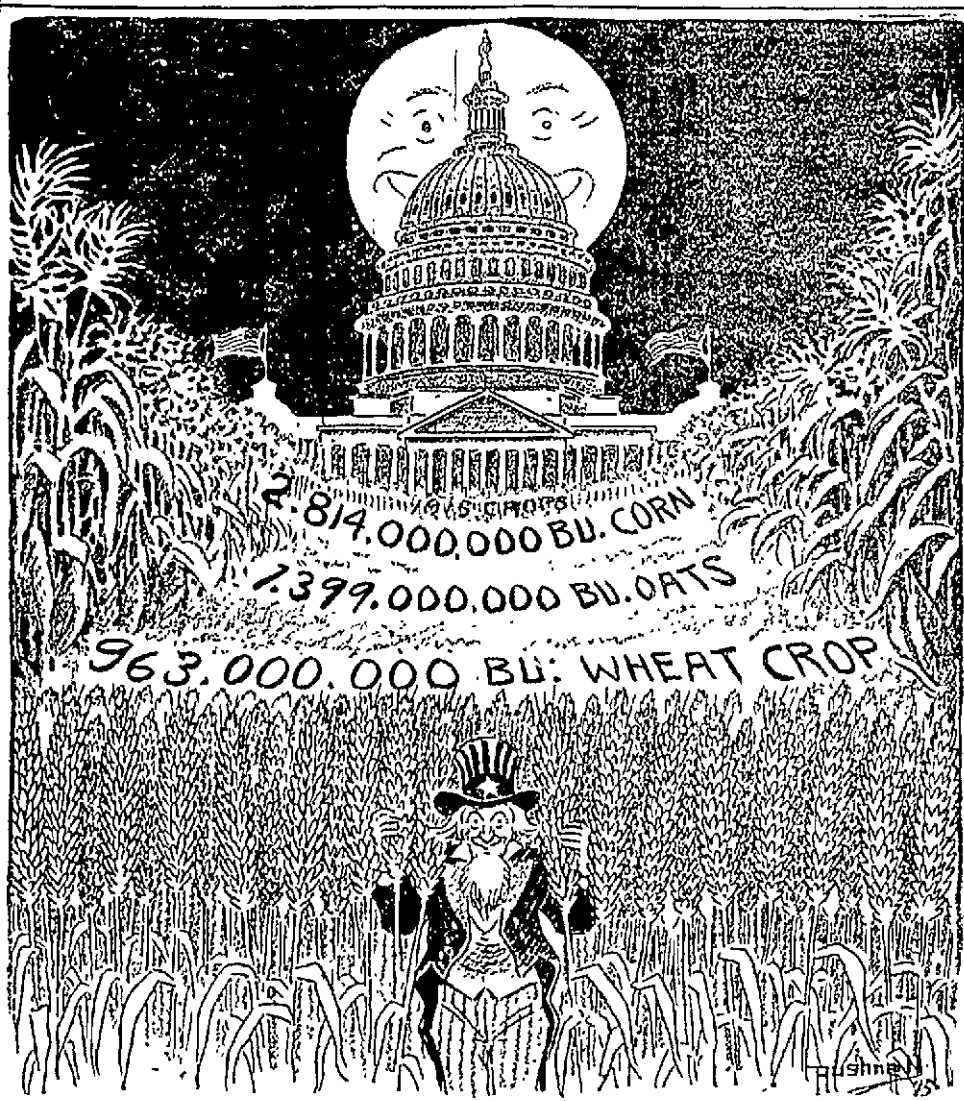

About the time that the inhabitants of a small town is so tired of looking at the same old brick stores, tumble-down depot, away-bucked elevator, half-headed postmaster, underfed preacher and bare-butted lawyer that he is ready to jump into the elctra for a change, the circus comes along. It is a new world of color, light, music, and human life. It is a world of beauty and of human life from Japan, which one derives from Egypt and bottled-down clowns from lands not yet discovered. And he shakes hands with the whole world in a day, and goes back to the dusty old main street, satisfied to struggle on until better times and the interurban arrive.

The circus is not intelligent, but in some parts of the country it takes the place of a mountain road and an excitement producer with no bad success.

A FAMILY FROM RUFFSDALE ON A LONG TRIP

Steeles of That Place Take a Tour to California in Auto.

THEY FIND ALL KINDS OF ROADS

Meet With Man Whose Father Built the First Mill in Scotland, Then Known as Fountain Mills. Men's Bible Class Interests; Other News

Special to The Courier.
SCOTSDALE, July 12.—W. F. Steele, of Ruffsdale, under the caption of "To Panama Expedition in a Ford," writes in the "Daily News," Mr. Steele is accompanied by his wife and their two sons, who aged 16 and the other 13 years.

"We left home May 12," writes Mr. Steele, "and had several blowouts before we had got out of sight of home, but kept at it, the boys doing the running, reaching Pittsburg and finding good roads. We camped along the Ohio river the first night and next day struck some very bad roads near Wellsville, but got through O. K. We tried to follow the Lincoln Highway as near as we could, but on account of much mud and work made detours. The roads were much more hilly than we expected. We saw many fine farms, good wheat crops, in Western Ohio where we camped over Sunday and attended Sunday school and church.

"On Monday morning we were soon over into Indiana with their fine farms, good roads and homes, plenty of corn, hogs and cattle and good grass, and it looked to me as if a farmer on 250 acres would have to know his business. The people, too, were very friendly and we camped often in school grounds, frequently finding the school houses unlocked, but we always slept in our tent.

"Anyone contemplating this kind of a trip will not do as I did and shine. The last night we camped in Illinois it rained heavily and our troubles began, with hard going next day through the black mud. We soon crossed the Mississippi at Clinton and the toll men took us many machines had passed over it. Our second Sunday we passed at Cedar Rapids, Iowa, with the boys who used to preach for us at our home church, Glenwood. On Monday the going was again hard for a small car with a camp outfit and four passengers, but we got through all right and began to meet other cars going west. It rained so hard that we stopped with a Holmsten family at Chelsea, Iowa, for four days. I tell it again and again, when we had to stop with a family named Karzon. People hearing it was a Pennsylvania car stuck came to see us, among them a man 100 years old, whose mother's name was Fought, a sister of Rev. Samuel Wakefield, the older people knew. He told us his father built the first mill at Scottdale, then known as Fountain Mills. We stayed there four days until the waters went down. We were not the only ones who felt blue. Take the renter who pays $5 to $10 per acre rent and thousands of acres to plant, and with the first of June near, you may imagine their feelings.

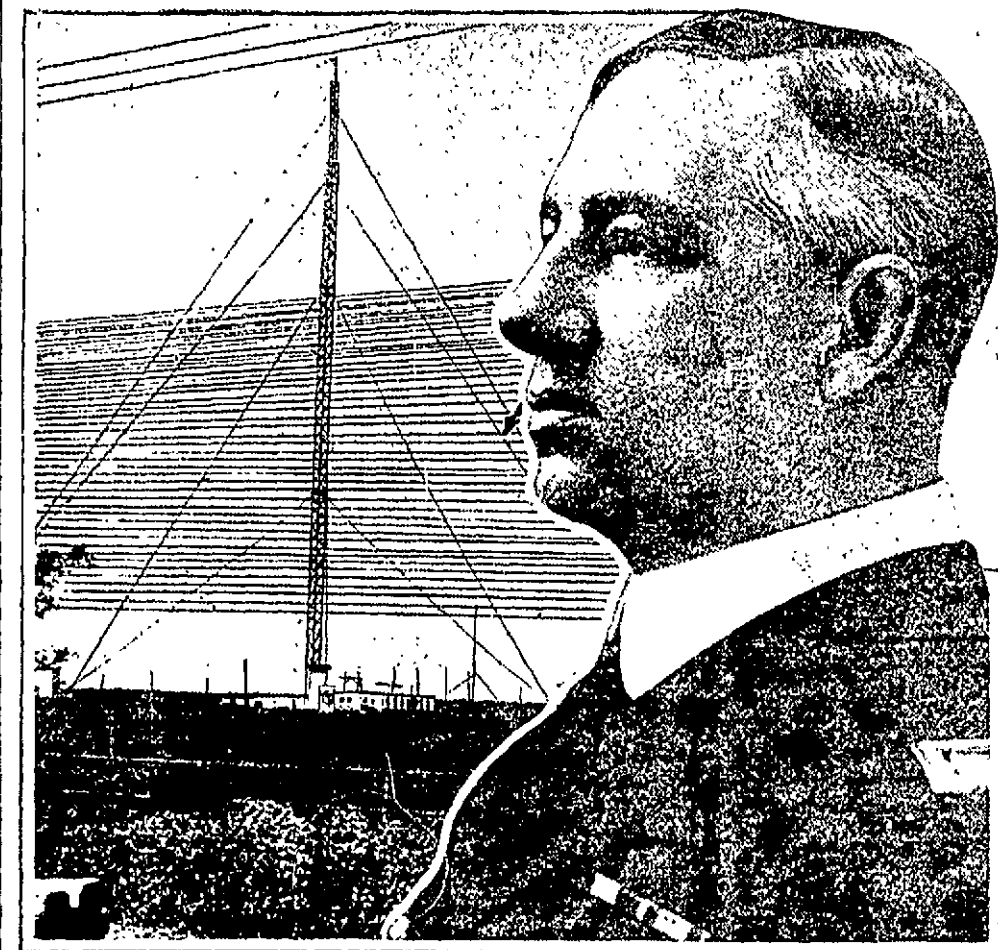

"Iowa is a great state with its 2500 acre land, lots of hogs, corn, automobiles and everything up-to-date, and taxes are not so high as in Pennsylvania according to the valuation. We crossed the Missouri river at Omaha, and found the eastern part of Nebraska very nice, everything looking prosperous with lots of wheat and alfalfa. We camped with two cars from Vermont on a farm near Centerville, three of the four being Ford. They had not seen any rain since they left, but it rained that night and the wind tore down their tent stakes and pulled the tent down. We got on the Lincoln Highway at Keosauqua, Nebraska, and saw the most and finest alfalfa I ever looked at. There was good going for 20 miles, then we struck the worst road I ever saw, where we had to get out all but the boy at the wheel. We saw other cars stuck, and one woman in slippers got out and help another in mud. I was, and another, they said was a bride of a few weeks, digging in the mud to get out. We tied a rope to the machine and all the men in the bunch and some of the women dragged it out.

"We passed several other machines. In Western Kansas things did not look so prosperous. We found a good place, and with no objection to campers. At Cheyenne, Wyoming, we had a little repairing done and got along pretty good, camping on the Rockies, about 10 miles west of the divide, with six machines from as many different states. We had to carry water with us, going for miles and miles without seeing water or even a tree. We stopped at Salt Lake City a part of a day. From Cheyenne to Reno, Nevada, is 1,105 miles by our guide book, and we made it in eight and a half days. The desert was the help about it. The most ever looked at. The road to Sacramento, which we finally reached, was fine. Then we began to get among the pine forest and everything was lovely. The people say the times are as hard here as back east."

MEETINGS.
The second monthly business and social meeting of the Men's Bible Class was held on Tuesday evening and there was a good sized crowd of the members present. In the absence of the president, J. T. Stuber, secretary, H. M. Young was elected chairman and the most important business was the preparation for the coming Westmoreland County Sunday School Association convention in September, the chairman being empowered to name a committee of three to look after this. The class was entertained that evening by Prof. W. M. Edwards, H. M. Young, Robert Hill and E. F. A REAL FLESH BUILDER FOR THIN PEOPLE

A New Discovery.
Thin men and women—that big, hearty, billowing dinner you ate last night. What became of all the fat producing nourishment it contained? You haven't gained in weight one ounce. That food passed from your body like unburned coal through an open grate. The material was there, but your food hasn't worked and stuck, and the plain truth is you hardly get enough nourishment from your meals to pay for the cost of cooking. This is true of thin folks the world over. Your nutritive organs, your functions of assimilation, are sadly out of gear and need reconstruction.

Cut out the foolish foods and funny sawdust diets. Omit the flesh cream, rubbers. Cut out everything but the foods you are eating now and out with every one of those single Sargol tablets. In two weeks note the difference. Five to eight good solid pounds of healthy "stay there" fat should be the net result. Sargol charges your weak, stagnant blood with millions of fresh new red blood corpuscles—gives the blood the carrying power to deliver every ounce of food-making material in your food to every part of your body. Sargol, too, mixes with your food and prepares it for the blood in easily assimilable form. Thin people gain all the weight from 10 to 25 pounds a month while taking Sargol, and the new flesh stays put. Sargol tablets are a scientific combination of six of the best food-making elements known to chemistry. They come in a tablet to a package, are pleasant and harmless and inexpensive, and all drugs, chemists in Connellsville and vicinity sell them. Sargol is an absolute guarantee of weight increase or money back—ADV.

LIFE AT STAKE.

Somewhere in the world 110 is at stake every minute of the day. Right at our own doors, perhaps, is going on a struggle as grim and fierce as any fight or flight on record. You hear the hollow tearing cough; see the ooze of blood which tells of the wounded lungs; mark the emaciated body and hectic cheek, and know a life is at stake.

Oil City, Pa.—Ten years ago my husband was so far gone with a "flu" that he had to give up his work and stated to go to a doctor three miles away. He only got two miles away when he had to give up and rest at the general store there. He could go no further. A neighbor made him take a bottle of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery; opened it and gave him all the dose and then he was able to return home. He finished the bottle and gained strength rapidly. He then bought a second bottle and it completely cured him so he was able to do a hard summer's work without complaint. This was ten years ago, and today he is working unloading lumber at the west end of the city.

Mrs. George HANLEY, 302 E. Third Street, Oil City, Pa.

"The use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery has saved many a life in just such a crisis. It cures obstinate, despondent coughs; stops the hemorrhages, straightens 'wheezy' lungs, and restores the emaciated body to its normal weight and strength. Made from native medicinal herbs by using glycerine—no alcohol. Sold in liquid or tablet form. Send to Dr. Pierce, Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y., for free book on Blood or Lungs."

Woman's World

A Woman Who Wants the Right to Wear Voter's Button.

DR. ANNA HOWARD SHAW.

The National American Woman Suffrage association has flooded the Panama-Pacific exposition with a silent argument for woman suffrage. This argument is nothing less than a modest little button which is appearing, almost overnight, as it were, upon the arm of thousands of women in attendance upon the exposition. The button reads merely, "I'm a Voter."

The idea is, of course, to make the visitor from the conservative eastern states realize, through visual aid, that there are thousands and thousands of well-groomed, happy, sensible-looking women who actually vote, and the National association has seized upon the Panama-Pacific exposition as the best possible place in which to demonstrate the truth of their contention. These buttons are being sent to women through the state suffrage organizations with which most of them are still affiliated. Several million have been turned out, it is said, for this novel demonstration.

The idea was conceived by Miss Jeannette Rankin of Montana, now a member of the congressional committee of the N. A. W. S. A., and was promptly seized upon by Dr. Anna Howard Shaw, president of the association.

"Miss Rankin can wear the button," said Dr. Shaw at the national headquarters in New York, "thanks to the men of Montana, but I can't wear it until the men of Pennsylvania give me the right next November. But I have saved a button in the hope that the men of Pennsylvania will be as just and as sensible as the western men, who have enfranchised 10,000,000 women and seem to be glad of it."

The "Heller" Mischief. Many a woman loused by a cold amuses herself and attends to necessary business over the telephone. But when all the rest of the family come down with like colds she wonders how they caught it, because she has "not kissed anybody."

Nobody thinks of the mouthpiece of the telephone, and yet where is there a more convenient harbor than that for germs breathed into it from throat and nose?

The average household does not even think of dusting out the transmitter, and it is cleaned only upon the occasional visit of the repair man from the telephone company. As a matter of fact, it should be washed out frequently with a disinfectant. Even the ear piece is benefited by an occasional "wipe," as it rests against the hair and ear of everybody in the house, to say nothing of visiting workmen who want to call up headquarters.

When You Clean Up. Have two towels that are too worn for further use and lay them in the bottom of the drawers, with lavender between the folds.

While the clothes on the line are airing, pack handkerchiefs, towels, etc., in mothproof paper bags or boxes to be stored away in the attic, and before the dew falls at night return cotton and other fabrics required for summer use to the drawers and wardrobes that have been cleaned and aired.

Destroy with a hard heart every useless thing and burn everything that you see no probability of needing in the near future. With the best of care odds and ends will accumulate, and the labor of handling and preserving them in the hope of finding use for them by and by is often more than they are worth.

Three Sewing Hints. In sewing in hot weather use an emery "strawberry" frequently. Passing the needle in and out through it removes moisture, all danger of rust and insures much easier manipulation. Never allow a needle to squeak.

Was the thread thoroughly before attempting to string beads or to sew them on any material. This makes the work easier as well as stronger, and the thread or sewing silk will never knot.

Instead of blinding or feeling seams on lingerie, use narrow lace insertion, one piece on each side of the new edges. Stitch on both sides with the sewing machine. Lace eras, also the bought ready-made lawn folds, are admirable for the purpose and are easy of manipulation.

There is no solemnity so deep, to a rightly thinking creature, as that of dawn.—Hoskins.

PAINTED POST.

Story of the Incident That Gave the Place Its Name.

There's not a drummer between New York and San Francisco who hasn't at some stage of his drumming career made game of the name of the town of Painted Post. And after everybody laughs you may hear the query, "But I wonder where it did get its name?" Here is the story:

In the summer of 1779 the English and Indians under a loyalist, McDougal, and Hunkton, a renowned Seneca war chief, returned north from a raid by way of Pine creek, the Tioga and the Conchocton. They brought with them their own wounded and some prisoners taken at Freely's fort.

Under the elms at the confluence of the Tioga and Conchocton Captain Montour, a half-breed and a noted war chief, died of his wounds. He was the son of Frontenac by the famous Indian Queen Catherine. He was buried by the river side, and above his grave was placed a post on which were painted various symbols and devices. This monument became known as the painted post and was a landmark often visited by the braves and chiefs of the Six Nations.

The post stood for many years after the settlement of the country. Finally it rotted down at the butt and was preserved in the barroom of a tavern until 1810, when it disappeared. Some say it was swept away during a freshet.—New York Sun.

CURIOUS COBRA TRAP.

And a Queer Snake Theory Held by the Natives of India.

A naturalist tells us of an odd kind of snake trap that caught its victim securely. It was a biscuit can, and in the bottom of it were some macaroons.

A cobra slipped the can, but a mouse was ahead of the cobra. The little thief was having a good time regaling himself on the macaroons, all unconscious that a snake was preparing to regale itself on mouse. Into the can went the head of the snake, but the head that went in was destined to come out less easily. The rough edges of the can irritated the cobra, and involuntarily it dilated its hood. That made it a prisoner. With the hood dilated the head could not be withdrawn, and the cobra remained in its tin prison until morning, when it was easily captured and killed.

Straddling, who knows the natives of India as well as he knows the snakes of that land, tells of an interesting theory held by these people. They are firmly convinced that for every human being a snake bites it loses one joint. When the number of joints the snake has caused equals the number of its joints the retreating head alone remains. The snake has now reached the height of its wicked desire, and at this point it develops wings and triumphantly disappears.—Washington Star.

The Clock's Hands. "Come, hurry up!" said the second hand of a clock to the minute hand. "You'll never get around in time if you don't. See how fast I'm going," continued the fuzzy little monitor as it fretted round on its pivot.

"Come, hurry up," said the minute hand to the hour hand, utterly oblivious of being addressed by the second hand. "If you don't be quick you'll never be in at the stroke of 1."

"Well, that's just what our young friend there has been saying to you." At this point the clock pealed forth the hour as the hour hand continued.

"You see, we're in time, not one of us behind. You take my advice, do your own work in your own way and leave others alone."

Iceland and Ireland. Iceland was once very near to becoming a part of the British empire. Uninhabited until the middle of the ninth century, it was first discovered by a little company of Irish monks, who had fled their own land to escape the ravages of the pagan Norsemen. They built themselves a home in the new land, and eventually intended to stay when, after a few years, the Norsemen also discovered Iceland, and the monks fled back to Ireland. Not a few Scotch and Irish emigrants, however, found their way to Iceland in later times.—London Express.

PICTURESQUE FROCK.

Lingerie Gown That Makes Wearer Look Like Frameless Picture.

PRETTY EVENING DRESS.

"Ah! Isn't she a picture?" is heard once in perhaps a very long while, and immediately every one within hearing covertly or frankly turns to look at what promises to be a pleasant vision.

And these "pictures" have not been any too plentiful recently, particularly in the not long gone period of blue skirts. But fashion now holds out a pretty promise that it is the thing to be picturequely dressed, and the woman who comes nearest to looking like a canvas belle that's lost her frame will elicit the biggest buzz of admiration.

GOSSIP AND ADVICE.

Scrap Books Excellent Way of Preserving Much Valuable Information. Many times you have seen in a magazine or newspaper an article or suggestion that you determined to save—and then either lost the magazine or clipping or threw it away during some cleaning up period. Why not reform?

One woman of methodical habits keeps a series of scrap books for just such articles and finds this a very neat and effective way of preserving ideas for future use.

One book is marked "Garden." In this book she has pasted every illustration or item of information on the subject that has interested her. There are pictures of trellises, arbors, pergolas, water gardens, benches or bordered paths, which she hopes to be able some time to add to her own garden; suggestions about flower or vegetable culture; advertisements she wishes to keep for reference; garden plans from various garden magazines, etc.

The other half of this book is devoted to notes on her own garden—dates on which she has planted, her success with various plants and seeds, the garden expense account, and any point that she may wish to recall at any time.

Another book is marked "House." In this she keeps articles and suggestions on household decoration. Samples of carpets, drapes and upholstery in certain illustrations of fireplaces, window seats, cupboards, stair railings, etc., that have appealed to her. Here, too, are written down the dimensions of each room, the number of windows and amount of material needed for curtains, the dates on which the last papers, rugs and curtains were bought, and the price of these. This system saves much time and trouble when a room is to be redecorated, for all the necessary information is at hand.

A large part of the book is devoted to the kitchen. In these pages are all the suggestions that have interested her. There is a list of various brands of flours, cereals and other foodstuffs. This is labeled "Pure Food Products," and only tested and approved brands are listed. In the kitchen pages also are noted notes on or advertisements of improved utensils and labor saving devices—washing machines, mayonaisse mixers, butter churns, silver cleaning pans, in fact, any approved labor saving device that she may wish to purchase.

In this way every item of household information that has interested her is preserved in accessible form with very little trouble. Recipes are not put in the scrap book, as they occupy little space and are more conveniently kept in a card index box on a shelf.

BIG TREE MAIL STATION.

Renowned as the Oldest Postoffice Building in America.

The pioneers of the northwest often made use of huge trees hollowed out by fire or decay. Some of these "tree houses" they occupied as temporary residences. Others they used as shelters for stock or as primitive barns. Only one, however, ever had the distinction of being a United States post-office. This was in the Chinlin county, in the state of Washington.

In early days the settlers were widely scattered, and it was a long journey over rough trails to the postoffice. Carriers could do no more than leave mail at some central point. The big cedar stump, twenty feet in diameter and reduced to a shell by fire, was a base from which a number of trails radiated.

By common consent it became the postoffice for a wide region. The settlers put on a roof of cedar shakes and nailed boxes around its interior, which they regarded as marked with their names. There was a large box for the outgoing mail. There were no locks, but the mails were never tampered with.

This primitive postoffice was used for more than a year. It has been carefully preserved and is annually visited by hundreds of interested sightseers. The stump is believed to be over 2,000 years old, which clearly establishes its right to the distinction of being the oldest postoffice building in America.—Youth's Companion.

A Trifle, Really. "That was a mighty attractive costume Mrs. Puregold wore at the dance last night."

"I suppose it was—if you say so—but it didn't seem to me there was enough to make much fuss over."—Richmond Times-Dispatch.

"I guess so. I met him this morning, and he said he expected to be on his feet in a few days."—Omaha Star.

"ASK WHAT I SHALL GIVE THEE"

1 Kings 1:1-15—July 15.

What Are Dreams?—When They Should Be Followed.—Solomon's Dream—His Heart Conditions Reflected—His Realization of His Responsibility—His Humility—His Request—God's Approval and the Happy Result Which Followed.

The fear of Jehovah is the beginning of wisdom.—Proverbs 9:10.

SOLOMON initiated his reign by making a great feast for his people at Gibeon. The account tells that he offered a thousand burnt offerings unto the Lord. This does not signify that the animals were burned entire, but that certain portions, particularly the fat, were burned as an offering to the Lord, while the food portions became the basis of the feast. We can see the wisdom of such a general acknowledgment of God and His inauguration of a new king; and the feast signified the king's good will and his desire to make his reign one of blessing to the people. The Divine ordering of the matter was recognized by the Israelites, who perceived that all things were to be done with an eye to God's approval.

Are Dreams Significant?

During this feast, which probably lasted several days, King Solomon had the wonderful dream narrated in our lesson. That it was supernatural there can be no doubt. Similarly God revealed Himself to others in ancient times, and especially to His people Israel, who had come into covenant relationship with Him at Mount Sinai through Moses. But He was not in covenant relationship with King Solomon, and he was not a prophet.

Although the Christian Church is peculiarly in relationship with God, and in a much closer relationship than that of the Jewish Law, never theless we must not suppose that all dreams which even concerned Christians may have are to be regarded as inspired. Very evidently the majority of our dreams are merely wanderings of our mind.

King Solomon's dream is a beautiful illustration of the power of God to make a man a king. It is a story of a man who was a dreamer, and who was given a dream which was a revelation of God's will to him. It is a story of a man who was a dreamer, and who was given a dream which was a revelation of God's will to him.

Because we are not in covenant relationship with God, we cannot have the same kind of dreams that King Solomon had. We can have dreams that are merely wanderings of our mind, but we cannot have dreams that are revelations of God's will to us.

St. Paul tells us that God's Word is sufficient to hinder God from using a dream as a means of instructing His spiritual children if that should seem at any time to be the proper course. Many of the Lord's people have had experience with dreams which seemed to give them instruction. Nevertheless there is but one sure way of receiving dreams—to interpret them only in full accord with the Scriptures.

The Apostle suggests that if an angel should preach any other Gospel than this, it should be rejected. Similarly, if a dream should suggest any other Gospel, it should be rejected.

Solomon's Wise Choice. In King Solomon's dream the Lord appeared to him, saying, "Ask what I shall give thee." So God is asking of all who would become His children. He desires to do them good, and wishes them to realize their needs and to make requests accordingly.

Solomon's answer in his dream shows a beautiful simplicity of character for a young prince just come to the throne. He requested God's mercy to his father's people.

King Solomon—The Wise Man.

of his father David. Touchingly he declared, "I am but a little child." This reminds us of the Apostle's words, "When I was weak, then I am strong." This was really the strength of Solomon's character; namely, that he was meek, teachable, like a little child—not boastful or self-confident, not blind to the privileges of his work.

Because of the responsibilities of the kingdom, for which he felt himself so incompetent, Solomon prayed, "Give therefore Thy servant an understanding heart to judge Thy people to administer justice to them; that I may discern between good and bad; for who is able to judge this Thy so great people?"

Is it any wonder that we read further that in the dream the Lord manifested His good pleasure at this request? "And God said unto him, Because thou hast asked this thing, I will do as thou hast said."

THINGS ALL OUGHT TO KNOW

As Christian Bible Students—The Satisfactory Proof of "Why God Permits Evil."

One of the questions which comes to nearly every thinking mind today is, "Why does God permit evil?" We look about us in the world we observe that it is filled with sorrow and trouble, sickness and pain and every trial we could enumerate, and we cannot help wondering WHY GOD ALLOWS IT. We realize that He is almighty and that He could prevent it if He wished. We read in His Word that He is more willing to do for His children than are earthly parents for theirs, and we know how much that means; yet sometimes it seems that those who try to do and live right have the most trouble. This question is made very clear in a book entitled, "The Divine Plan of the Ages." Every statement is backed by Scripture, and shows that while God does not sanction evil HE HAS HAD A PURPOSE IN ALLOWING SIN AND DEATH TO REIGN THIRTY SIX THOUSAND YEARS. This and many other subjects of deep interest to all of God's people are discussed fully and in language easy of comprehension.

"Hush!" she said, and through the lace window hangings Broffin saw her lift a warning finger. "What I am telling you, Mr. Raymer, is in the strictest confidence; we mustn't let a breath of it get out. But that wasn't all. Mr. Griswold was dreadfully sick and, of course, he couldn't tell us anything about himself. But while he was delirious he was always muttering something about money, money; money that he had lost and couldn't find, or money that he had found and couldn't lose. Then when we thought he couldn't possibly get well, Doctor Bertie and I ransacked his suitcases for cards or letters or something that would tell us who he was and where he came from. There wasn't the slightest thing!"

"And that was when you began to suspect?" queried Raymer.

"That was when the suspicion began to torture me. I fought it; oh, you don't know how hard I fought it! There he was, lying sick and helpless; utterly unable to do a thing or say a word in his own defense; and yet, if he were the robber, of course, we should have to give him up. It was terrible!"

"I should say so," was Raymer's sympathetic comment. "How did you get it straightened out, at last?"

"It hasn't been altogether straightened out until just lately—within the past few days," she went on gravely. "After he began to get well, I made him talk to me—about himself, you know. There didn't seem to be anything to conceal. At different times he told me all about his home, and his mother, whom he barely remembers, and the big-hearted, open-handed father who made money so easily in his profession—he was the Griswold, the great architect, you know—that he gave it to anybody who wanted it—but I suppose he has told you all this?"

"No; at least, not very much of it," Miss Griswold went on smoothly, falling sympathetically into the reminiscent vein.

"Kenneth went to college without ever having known what it is to lack anything in reason that money could buy. A little while after he was graduated his father died."

"Leaving Kenneth poor, I suppose; he has inherited as much to me, once or twice," said Raymer.

"Leaving him awfully poor. He wanted to learn to write, and for a long time he stayed on in New York, living just as he could, and having a dreadfully hard time of it. I imagine, though he would never say much about that part of it. That is why I think he is a socialist. At that I tell that I just must know, and having a cost. One day when we were driving, I brought him here and—introduced him to Mr. Galbreath. It was so sacred that I could talk it—but I did it!"

Raymer laughed. "Of course nothing came of it?"

"Nothing at all. And then, right out of a clear sky, came another proof that was even more convincing. Do you happen to know who the young woman was who discovered the bank robber on the steamboat?"

"IT. How should I know?"

"I didn't know but she had told you," was the demure rejoinder. "It was Charlotte Farnham."

"What?" ejaculated Raymer. But he was not more deeply moved than was the man behind the window curtains. If Broffin's dead clear had not been already reduced to shapeless indistinctness, Miss Griswold's cool announcement, carrying with it the assurance that his secret was no secret, would have nettled it.

"It's so," she was adding calmly. "I found out. How do I know? Because her father bought the draft at poppa's bank, and in the course of time it came back with the Bayou State Security dated paying stamp on it. See how easy it was?"

Raymer's laugh was not altogether mirthful.

"You are a witch," he said. "In there anything you don't know?"

"Not very many things that I really need to know," was the mildly beautiful retort. "But you see, now, how foolish my suspicions were."

Raymer nodded. Though he would not have admitted it under torture, the entire matter figured somewhat as a mountain constructed out of a rather small molehill to a man for whom the subtleties lay in a region unexplored. He wondered that the clear-minded little "social climber," as his sister called her, had ever bothered her nimble brain about such an abstruse and far-fetched question of identities.

"You said, a few minutes ago, that Griswold called himself a socialist. That isn't quite the word. He is a sociologist."

Miss Griswold ignored the nice distinction in names.

"Socialism goes with being poor, doesn't it?" she remarked. "Since Mr. Griswold's ship has come in, I suppose he finds it easier, and pleasant, to be a theoretical leveler than a practical one."

"That is another thing I have never been quite able to understand," said the iron founder. "You say his father left him poor; where did he get his money?"

"Why, don't you know?" was the innocent query. And then, with a pretty affectation of embarrassment, read or perfectly simulated: "If he hasn't told you, I haven't."

"Of course, I don't want to pry," said Raymer, loyal again.

"I can give you a hint, and that is all. Don't you remember 'My Lady Jezebel,' the unsigned novel that made such a hit last summer?"

"Why, bless goodness, yes! Did he write that?"

"He has never admitted it in any many words. But I'll divide secrets with you. He has been reading bits of his new book to me, and he has a blind person could tell. I asked him once if he could guess how much the author of 'My Lady Jezebel' had been paid, and he said, with the most perfectly transparent carelessness: 'Oh, about a hundred thousand, I suppose.'"

"Tally!" said Raymer, laughing.

"Griswold has put an even ninety thousand into my little egg basket out at the plant. But, of course you knew that, everybody in Wabasha knows it by this time."

Miss Griswold did not reply, and for a little while they were both silent. Then Raymer said:

"I wonder if McMurtry doesn't think I've dropped out on him. I guess I'd better go and see. Don't wait any longer on my notions, unless you want to, Miss Margaret."

When Raymer had gone, the opportunity which Broffin had so lately carved was his. Miss Griswold was left alone on the big veranda, and he had only to step out and confront her. Instead, he got up quietly and went back through the lobby with his head down and his hands in his pockets and the purring bit of the door clear disappeared between his strong teeth and became a cud of chagrin. There had been a goal in sight, but Miss Griswold had beat him to it.

And the winner of the small handicap? With a deep breath-drawing that was almost a sob, Miss Griswold sprang up, stole a swift confirming glance at the empty chair behind the window hangings, and crossed the veranda to stand with one arm around a supporting pillar. And since the battle was fought and won, and the friendly pillar gave its stay and shelter, the velvet eyes shined suddenly and the ripe red lips were trembling like the tips of a frightened child.

help. . . . She looked away, out across the lake where a fitful breeze was turning the molten-metal dipples into laughing wavelets. Then, with one of her sudden topic-wrenchings: "Speaking of help, reminds me. Why didn't you tell me you had gone into the foundry business with Edward Raymer?"

"Because it didn't occur to me that you would care to know. I guess," he answered unspectingly. "As a matter of fact, I had almost forgotten it myself."

"Mr. Raymer didn't ask you for help?"

"No; it was my own offer."

"But he did tell you that he was in trouble?"

"Yes," hesitantly.

"What kind of trouble was it, Kenneth? I have the best right in the world to know."

Griswold straightened himself in his chair and the work-weariness became a thing of the past.

"You can't have a right to know anything that will distress you."

"Foolish!" she chided. "You may as well tell me."

"I've got him!" He cried.

well told me. Mr. Raymer had borrowed money at poppa's bank. What was the matter? Did he have to pay it back—all at once?"

"There seemed to be no further opening for evasion. 'Yes; I think that was the way of it,' he answered."

Griswold expected something in the nature of an outburst. What he got was a transfixed glance of the passionate sort, quick with open-eyed admiration.

"And you just tossed your money in to the breach as if you had millions of it, and by now you've almost forgotten that you did it?" she exclaimed. "Kenneth, dear, there are times when you can be so heavenly good that I can hardly believe it. Are there any more men like you over on your side of the world?"

At another time he might have smiled at the boyish frankness of the question. But it was a better motive than the analyst's that prompted his answer.

"Plenty of them, Margaret, girl; too many for the good of the race. You mustn't try to make a hero out of me. Once in a while I get a glimpse of the real Kenneth Griswold—you are giving me one just now—and it's sickening. For a moment I was meanly jealous; jealous of Raymer. It was only the writing part of me, I hope, but—"

He stopped because she had suddenly turned her back on him and was looking out over the lake again. When she spoke, she said: "See! The breeze is freshening; out on the water. You are fagged and tired and needing a breacer. Let's go and do a turn on the lake in the City."

From where he was sitting Griswold could see the trim little catboat, resplendent in polished brass and mahogany, riding at its buoy beyond the lawn landing-stage. He cared little for the water, but the invitation pointed to a delightful prolongation of the baking process which had come to be one of the chief luxuries of the Moreside afternoons.

At the landing stage Griswold made himself useful, paying out the sea line of the movable mooring buoy and hauling on the shore line until the handsome little craft lay at their feet. Strictly under orders he made sail on the little ship, and when the captain had taken her place at the tiller he shoved off, and when the helmswoman had laid the course up the lake, Griswold, pipe filled and lighted, pilloved his head in his clasped hands and a great contentment, flowing into all the intricacies and leveling all the inequalities, lapped him in its soothing flood.

He was still half-dozing when he was made to realize that the murmuring rush of water under the catboat's fore-foot had changed into a series of resounding thumps; that the wind was rising, and that the summer afternoon sky had become suddenly overcast. The pretty little maiden was pushing the helm down with her foot and hauling in briskly on the sheet when he sat up.

"What's this we're coming to?" he asked, thinking less of the changed weather conditions than of the charming picture she made in action.

"Weather," she said shortly. "Look behind you."

He looked and saw a huge storm cloud rising out of the northwest and spreading like a great gray dust curtain from horizon to zenith.

"There's a good bunch of wind in that cloud," he said, springing to help his companion with the slating mainsail. "Hurry! We better lie up under the island and let it blow over."

"No," she snapped. "We'll have to reef, and be quick about it. Help me!"

He helped with the reefing, and the great mainsail had been successfully reduced to its smallest area and hoisted home again before the trees on the western shore began to howl and churn in the precursor blasts of the coming storm.

"It will hit us in less than a minute, how about weathering the island?" he asked.

"We've got to weather it," was the instant decision; "we can't go around it. Then, the catboat still hanging in the wind's eye, 'Help me get her over!'"

"Hurry! You better let her fall off a little more and run for it!" he urged, and he had to shout into the pink ear nearest to him to make him self heard above the roaring of the wind and the crashing plunges of the boat.

She shook her head and made an impatient little gesture with her elbow toward the storm-lashed roadway over the bows. Griswold winced the spray out of his eyes and looked. At first he saw nothing but the wild waste of whitecaps, but at the next attempt he made out the hotel steam launch, half-way to the entrance of the southern bay and a little to leeward of the City's course. The small steamer was evidently no sea-born, and with more courage than seamanship, its stern-penn was driving straight for the Inn bay without regard for the direction of the wind and the seas.

"That's Ole Halverson!" cried the tiller maiden with scorn in her voice. "He thinks because he happens to have a steam engine he needn't look to see which way the wind is blowing."

IRON INDUSTRY'S SHOWING EARLY IN 1915 ENCOURAGING

Geological Survey Says the Trend in First Half Is Satisfactory.

STEADILY INCREASING OUTPUT

Precedents Point to Larger Output
Each Year Following One of Declining Production; Prices Are Lower Than Year Ago; Some Features.

A glance over the course of the iron industry during the first half of 1915 is at least reassuring for it indicates that the moderate hopes entertained at the beginning of the year have been fairly well realized. The beginning of 1915 found the lower lake docks and the blast furnaces dependent on lake ore, well stocked with ore, for which there was little demand, yet the mines were equipped to supply more than has ever been required. Precedents generally pointed to an increase in output of ore in 1915, for with only a few exceptions, there has been a larger output of iron ore each year following a year of declining production. The iron mining season has begun auspiciously for the Lake Superior district, for in the month of May, 1915, the shipments were 5,012,357 long tons, compared with 3,652,043 long tons in the corresponding month in 1914, according to the Iron Age, an increase of 1,160,294 tons, or more than 30 per cent.

As to pig iron output, there has been a steadily increasing production for each of the first five months of 1915. This contrasts most favorably with the monthly output in 1914, which reached its maximum in March and then tended steadily downward to the end of the year. The production in May, 1915, while not quite reaching that of March, 1914, was about 5 per cent greater than that of May, 1914, and all indications now point to an increased total output of pig iron in 1915.

Prices of Bessemer and basic pig at Pittsburgh in June, 1915, showed an advance of 5 to 15 cents a ton over those of May to March, 1915, but they were about 30 cents a ton lower than prices of those grades in June, 1914. Prices of No. 2 foundry at Pittsburgh have remained practically stationary, this year and are about 15 cents a ton lower than in June, 1914, while the price of foundry No. 2 at Richmond has declined 25 cents a ton within the last month, and is 35 cents lower than in June, 1914. The iron price, therefore, are not particularly encouraging at present.

Among the indications of returning confidence, however, is the gradual resumption in 1915 of much construction work at iron and steel plants. Had been abruptly stopped at the outbreak of the European war, as well as the beginning of considerable new work. Important extensions at the plants of the Bethlehem Steel Company have been resumed; important new, or resumed operations of the U. S. Steel Corporation are under way at the Homestead, New Castle, Sharon, Gary, Solon, Thomson, and Duluth plants; a brand new recovery plant is being constructed at Fairfield, Ala., and a plant for the production of phosphorus fertilizer from basic open-hearth slag at Knoxville, Ala. The construction of brand new recovery plants is especially active at present, for, besides those already mentioned plants are being erected by the Thomas A. Edison Company at Woodward, Ala., the Northwestern Iron Company at St. Louis, Mo., and the Republic Iron and Steel Company at Youngstown, Ohio. Our American ship industry, which requires large quantities of iron and steel, for which the future appears particularly bright just now, is that of shipbuilding. The great destruction of ships in the war, coupled with the inability of European builders to replace them, in account of the high prices of steel and of labor, and also because practically all European shipyards are busy in naval construction work, has caused a flood of orders to be poured into American shipyards, especially in the east. It is probable, therefore, that with the work now in hand and in sight, American shipbuilders will have all the business they can handle for several years. The general outlook for the latter half of 1915 is better than that at the beginning of the year, yet in the face of considerable enforced idleness, especially in southern iron and steel centers, the situation can only be said to show very marked improvement before it can be regarded as satisfactory.

HILL TOPS VICTORS.

Defeat Davidson Third by Large Score in Seven Innings.

The West Side Hill Tops defeated the Davidson third team last evening on the Davidson grounds by the overwhelming score of 11 to 3, in a seven inning game. The West Side team turned the pit all over the field, the only hit being made by Bluer, who got a double.

Davidson did not have a look in until the fifth, and then they made the game interesting. The West Siders let two slip. In the seventh Davidson pushed another across.

The Hill Tops went games with any 15 year old men that can play good ball. The Hill Tops have played good ball this season, having lost but 1 out of 16 games played. Anyone wishing games and a home catcher, come at the West Side Newsstand.

Score by Innings:
Hill Tops 3 5 0 0 1 1-11
Davidson 0 0 0 0 1 1-3

WIN ONE-SIDED CONTEST

Wheeler Takes Easy Game From West Penn Master Mechanics.

The Master Mechanics of the West Penn Power House were defeated last evening by the fast Wheeler nine on the Wheeler grounds, 10-7. The Wheeler boys took shots in several innings and aided by the errors on the part of the Master Mechanics ran up a big score. After the first inning Wheeler was always in the lead.

Here they twirled for the Wheeler nine and his opponents got but four hits. Bad fielding at times let runners cross the plate.

Wheeler will play the Dunbar nine Friday evening on the Wheeler diamond.
